I think this case will likely plea – although I'm not positive. How about if we leave it that we will call you on your cell Tuesday if we are going to need you? I'll let the judge know that if it goes you won't be able to get here until late in the afternoon. If I hear anything definitive Monday I'll let you know as well.

Thanks!
Stacey

I just wanted to give you an update on my schedule for Tuesday, Dec. 13th. Besides the possible district case I have in Springfield, I also have at least 3 Superior Court case in the trial pool for next week, with one that is definitely scheduled to start on Monday. In that case, the ADA thinks she will need me on Tuesday, but possibly on Wednesday. Due to the judge's availability, the trial will only be going in the morning sessions, so I should be available to you in Wareham in the afternoon on Tuesday, though I may not be able to get there by 2pm. Please let me know as early as possible if the [REDACTED] case is actually going to trial so I can plan accordingly. You can try to call me at the lab (413-545-2607) or on my cell ([REDACTED]). Thanks.

The ADA in Springfield replied to my email as follows:

"I would say this case has a better chance than most drug cases of going to trial. However, it is a relatively young case and the defendant is not held; it will not be first in line to get a judge. I would say the chances are definitely below 50% but it definitely could go."

Not sure how/if this helps. Since it is not the first case in line, I'm not sure if the ADA would be able to get me on before the lunch break if I'm needed. I could also be in Wareham early in the morning to see how that goes (esp. if I can be done testifying before the break) and let the Springfield ADA know that if he needs me it will have to be in the afternoon. Your thoughts?

I just thought I'd let you know that I am on call for a case in Springfield on 12/13/11, but they rarely go to trial this quickly. I'll also email the ADA involved to try to find out more about what is really going on with his case. Thanks.
